Gail Levin Richmond, Don Castleman : Mastering Trusts and Estates (Carolina Academic Press Mastering Series) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Mastering Trusts and Estates (Carolina Academic Press Mastering Series):

This book explains the rules for transferring property interests during the owners life and at his or her death. In addition to transfers covered by wills and trusts, it covers transfers by intestate succession, by outright gift, and by beneficiary designation. Discussion includes the transferor's goals, the potential roadblocks to meeting those goals, and default rules that may apply when the transferor failed to consider those roadblocks. Students will see how the various ways for transferring property resemble each other, how they differ, and how they interact with each other. This book includes numerous examples illustrating the relevant concepts.

About the Author Gail Levin Richmond is a Professor of Law at Nova Southeastern University Shepard Broad College of Law. The late Don Castleman was a Professor at the Wake Forest University School of Law.
