S. Bjarnason Daora : Parents and Exceptionality Social Policy and Social Capital: Experiences of Having a Disabled Child in Icelandic Families, 1974-2007 (Children's Issues, Laws and Programs)

before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Parents and Exceptionality Social Policy and Social Capital: Experiences of Having a Disabled Child in Icelandic Families, 1974-2007 (Children's Issues, Laws and Programs):

A book about parents of disabled children, their stories and experiences in a changing world of economic and social policy in Iceland in the period 1974-2007. It narrates ordinary stories of seventy-five extraordinary families in pursuit of ordinary lives, in a tiny welfare society on an island just beneath the Arctic Circle.
