Patent Drawing Rules is the ideal, concise reference book for patent attorneys, patent agents, patent draftsmen, inventors, libraries, science and invention museums, and people outside of the United States applying for a U.S. patent. The well-illustrated book covers how patent drawings are made; what patent drawings should and must illustrate in applications for nonprovisional and design patents; provisional application for patent drawings; PCT and Hague Agreement international applications; and how to prepare drawings for electronic submission. The book outlines the various patent drawing rules of the United States Patent and Trademark Office and the World Intellectual Property Organization into a single book of 250 pages with 114 sample illustrations. About the Author Murray Henderson is a graduate of Cooper School of Art, and attended Cleveland State University, Hawaii Pacific University and the University of Hawaii.
