SirCharlzBy SirCharlzLawyers are as crooked as car mechanics, home repairmen, or anyone else in whom people may unwittingly place their trust.Everyone should read this book to see the things lawyers do in light of their "Professional Code of Conduct" and what is affectinately known as "Legal Ethics"!

This is a reference work on the subject of claims and loss prevention. Although this work is extensive, the content is focused. The primary goal is that this work be a primer, intended to be read from cover to cover. To achieve that objective, specific topics are emphasized. Experience demonstrates that a substantial percentage of all claims, including most defense costs, settlements and judgment, are attributable to a relatively small number of problems.
