As a spoiler to non-law school studies - these problems don't really have an answer: it's all gray, so that might be frustrating at times.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Bad Used BookBy JessThe writing in the book makes it almost unreadable and wasn't as described

Kaufman and Wilkins mark the 20th anniversary of Problems in Professional Responsibility for a Changing Profession with a new 5th edition. Their new edition covers judicial, legislative, and executive developments in the traditional fields of conflicting interests and confidentiality, specialty fields of corporate and government representation as well as representation of those with impaired capacity. It also deals with the problems created by the increasing nationalization and internationalization of law practice, including the basic problem of trying to determine whose professional responsibility law governs the activity of lawyers when they engage in activity beyond their home jurisdictions. Various efforts to reform the profession here and abroad to meet the legal needs of clients and would-be clients are also presented. The authors have added substantial new material dealing with the demographics and institutions of law practice and their effect on professional identity.

About the Author Andrew L. Kaufman is the Charles Stebbins Fairchild Professor of Law at Harvard Law School. David Wilkins is the Kirkland Ellis Professor of Law and Director of the Program on the Legal Profession at Harvard Law School.
